Tree advisor may quit

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Bay St. Louis' tree advisor is threatening to resign because, he says, the city is not enforcing its own regulations.

After a brief, private meeting with Mayor Eddie Favre on Tuesday, tree advisor Philip Remel cited "logging" operations at two sites -- Camp Onward and Casino Magic -- which he said violate the city's ordinance that protects Live Oaks and Magnolias.

Ironically, Remel made his statement to City Council only a few minutes after Council president Tad Black complained to Mississippi Power Co. officials about what Black said was unnecessarily severe trimming of some trees near power lines.

Black said the power company apparently wants its trimming contractors to maximize the extent of such trimming, to lengthen the intervals in which it must be repeated.

"In the past, we've had some of our protected trees ruined by Mississippi Power," said Black. Mississippi Power's David Mauffray said he would see to it that the tree-trimming contractor is more closely monitored, to prevent such situations.

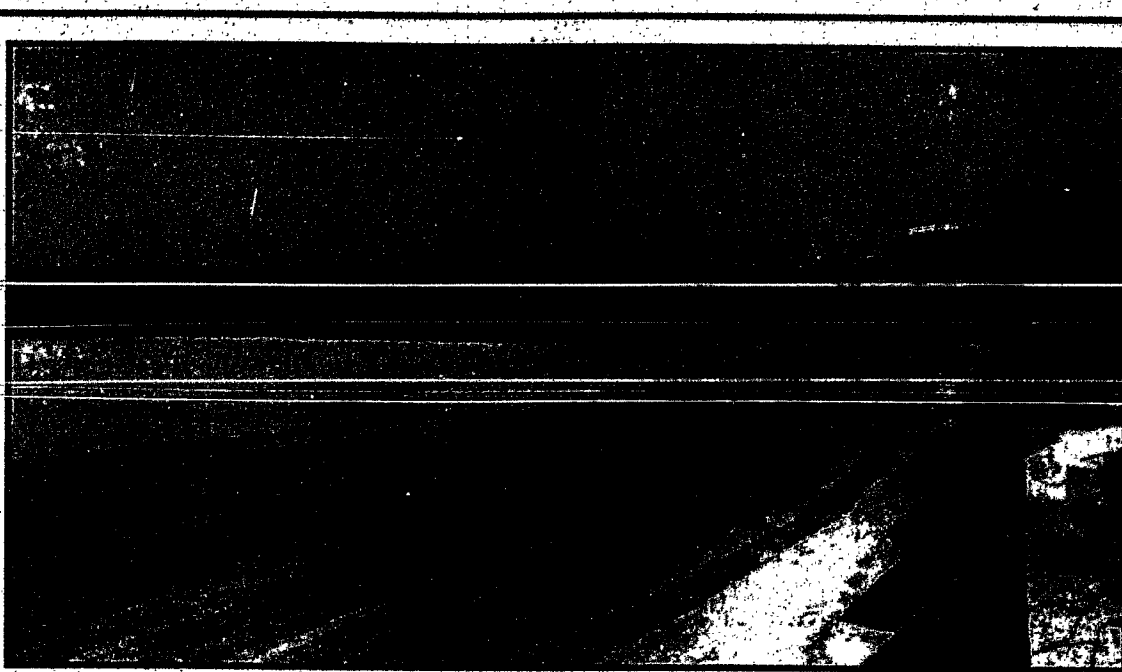

Later, Remel said he'd notified council members twice this summer about violations of the tree ordinance. In the case of the Camp Onward tract, Remel said Building Inspector William Carrigee reacted to news of logging by halting the operation.

In the case of Casino Magic, Remel said he advised Carrigee Aug. 31 to halt similar logging and got no action. Remel said neither Camp Onward nor Casino Magic owners submitted required plans for protecting trees covered under the ordinance, or a site plan for city review.

Mayor Eddie Favre, asked by a council member to explain the situation, said he would be happy to do so -- in executive session only. Council did not have such a session following its regular meeting, and there was no more public mention of the issue during Tuesday's meeting.

Carrigee said Wednesday he had halted the logging operation on the 20-acre tract known as Camp Onward as soon as he learned of it, and ordered Remel

News too late for Main Street

BY MARY G. SEILEY

City officials have a state opinion that property at the foot of Main Street is publicly owned -- but the news came too late to include it in the sand beach project.

Mayor Eddie Favre said Friday that contractors reached the Bookter Street terminus of the beach project and had demobilized before word came from the Secretary of State's office concerning ownership of a 200-foot strip in question.

But, said the mayor, the city very probably will stand on the state's opinion and include that property in a future waterfront project. Details of that development are still in the early planning stages.

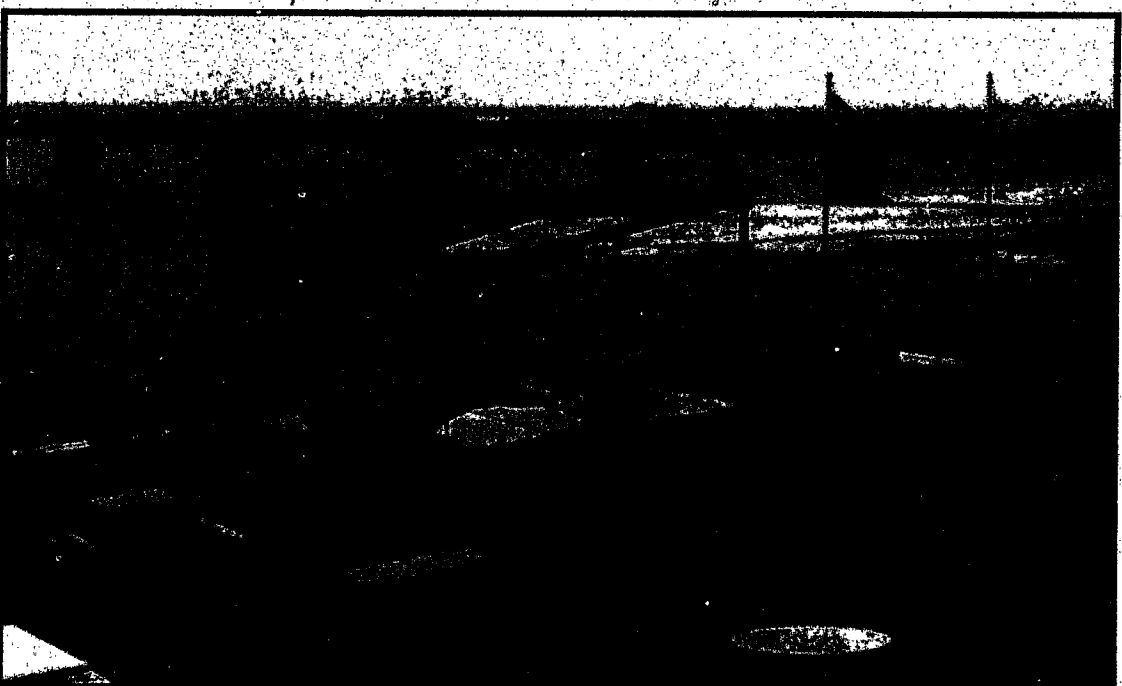

The Murphy family, which owns Dan B's on Beach Boulevard, objected to the city sand beach project a year ago in a letter to City Council. But it was only after the construction began last month that their attorney threatened to sue if the city included the disputed tract of land in the beach project.

That threat enraged city officials, but they took it seriously enough to double-check with the state Secretary of State's office for an opinion. Meanwhile, the administration told the beach workers to skip the Murphy area and finish the project southward to Bookter street.

The pumping was completed Thursday evening, and workers pulled pipes back northward, past the Murphy land.

Overall, the $700,000 project included a 200-foot wide sand berm from Bookter to Bay View Court, an area protected by a deteriorating seawall.

The new beach was not pumped in on the property behind Dan B's. The Murphy family, which owns the business, had objected to the project and threatened to sue the city. The city received a ruling from the Secretary of State's office on Thursday that the property is publicly owned. However, the beach contractors had demobilized by the time news reached City Hall. Consequently the area will remain beach-free.

Possible sewage code considered

BY ED LEPOMA

Frustrated planners may have found a way to enforce stricter wastewater regulations in unincorporated areas of Hancock County.

The County Planning commission met Thursday, and heard from Bill Carrigee, a building inspector for the city of Bay St. Louis.

Carrigee said the county might want to consider adopting the International Individual Private Sewage Disposal Code. He said the code deals with how to install, inspect and monitor septic tanks and on-site treatment systems.

He said it would give the county control over what is seeping into water systems, bayous and canals from untreated sewage coming from trailers and houses in unincorporated areas.

"It will give you control of the sewerage system without getting you into a bunch of trouble," he said.

Carrigee told Commission Chairman John Scaffide he has ordered a copy of the code, and it would be available to commissioners by next week. Commissioners said they wanted to study details for implementing the proposed code before taking any action.

Where are candidates?

BY ED LEPOMA

Campaign signs are popping up all over Pass Christian, but nobody's officially qualified for the vacated Mayor's seat.

City Clerk Vikki Goff said there's no qualifying fee to get on the ballot for the October 3 election. All a candidate needs is a petition signed by at least 50 registered voters.

As of last Friday, no one had turned in the required petition, said Goff, but three candidates did come by her office to pick up the forms.

However, drivers along Scenic Drive in Pass Christian or elsewhere in West Harrison County are greeted by candidates' signs.

The three that are likely to be in the running are: Billy McDonald, a former three-term Hancock County Supervisor; Mary Jean Kalif, currently

City to close railroad crossing

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Only one, rarely used, railroad crossing will be closed in Bay St. Louis, city officials learned last week.

Mayor Eddie Favre said state Transportation Department officials have agreed to the closure of Agnes Street's juncture with CSX rail lines. That's a far cry from the five closings that were identified as possibilities more than two years ago.

Bay St. Louis City Council agreed in 1993 to join CSX in a petition to close four rail/street crossings, including Agnes, St. Charles, Ballentine and Citizen streets. Local officials said at the time it appeared the state would force a number of such closings all across the Coast.

Rather than have the state mandate what crossings would be closed to vehicular traffic, city officials chose what they thought would be the least controversial crossings. Then, they used that proposal in negotiations with CSX, to lower the price tag for city acquisition of the former CSX depot.

Later, CSX agreed with city planners not to seek closure of St. Charles Street, which plays a key role in a future transportation layout of the city.

A year passed, and the issue lay fallow. But when it resurfaced, residents of Ballentine and Citizen streets stormed City Hall in protest.

State Transportation officials, meanwhile, said the issue had more or less been shoved to the back burner in Bay St. Louis: they had received no petition to consider closing any crossings here. And, state officials said they would not force any closings that were opposed by city officials.

Almost three months later, however, CSX officials raised the issue anew, warning the

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

Cleanliness/godliness

Dr. Ignace Semelweis suffered the abuse heaped upon most prophets when he laid the blame for frequent childbirth infections at the door of medical students who did not wash their hands between the pathology lab and the delivery room.

He was stunned to notice how many more infections occurred in births attended by medical students than the number in births attended by midwives.
The difference: medical students rarely washed their hands on the way to the delivery room.

Derided by and considered crazy by most other doctors, he wound up in an insane asylum where he died within ten years.

Why should anyone be called crazy for applying what is obviously an act of common sense:
namely, washing one's hands?

Although that was 148 years ago, presumably ample time to acquire a dash more of common sense, doctors as a group are still very remiss in handwash-ings between various activities.

In fact, medical students may be far ahead of the doctors on that score. Some months ago, at a medical convention in New Orleans, medical students were given as an assignment the observation of doctors going about their meeting activities.

Perhaps the greatest shocker was their rest room visits. Fewer than one of three doctors washed their hands after using the rest room facilities. It is a toss-up whether this is more disgusting at table or in the operating room.

I repeat here what I have said before about highway travel, which no doubt reflects what happens in homes and most other places. Most males — I cannot account for females — do not wash their hands after using rest room facilities.

Then, of course, they proceed directly to the objects for sale in the convenience store, finger them and help themselves to the sandwiches, cold drinks, coffee, etc. A lot of good it does for the rest of us to wash our hands!

Likewise, I repeat there the incident in a restaurant where one of the waitresses, who was busting a table, coughed into her hands, then went right on busting. Had she come to wait on us, I would have put my two cents into the deal.

As it was, one wondered about talking to the manager, about the thin line between being vigilant and being obnoxious, about the straightforward refusal to be exposed to germs and viruses of unknown contagion and virulence.

"During the rite of peace, should I shake the hand of someone who has been coughing into her/his hands?" a troubled parishioner asked me recently.

"Of course not!" I answered without hesitation. "If anything, take your handkerchief into your hands and bring it up to your mouth, signifying to the offender that handkerchiefs and other precautions against spreading germs do exist."

Infinitely more than during the rite of peace, the coughing and sniveling of communicants complicates the sharing of the one cup of the Eucharist, where many lips cradle the cup and drool into it in the act of quaf-ing the blood of Jesus.

That is the principal reason why dipping the host into the chalice is by far more hygienic than drinking from the one cup, although the latter is much more symbolic.

In any case, the lesson of "Cleanliness is next to godliness" is as clear in the delivery or operating room as it is in the convenience store, at home, at school or in church.

Library gripes aired at Waveland public hearing

BY RICHARD MEEK

A scheduled public hearing to discuss Waveland's proposed budget turned into a forum for angry residents to express their displeasure over plans to turn the Waveland Library into a literacy center.

The library proposal calls for the Waveland facility to be converted into a full-time literacy center, carrying paperback books only. Residents will have to go to the main library in Bay St. Louis to check out hardback books.

The library will receive an additional mill, or about $25,000, from the city, bringing the total funding from Waveland to $50,000.

One outspoken critic said she was opposed to the "increased millage because it is paired with the removal of a traditional library from the city of Waveland."

"I think it would be a disservice to the people of Waveland to allow (library officials) to take our library away because they need a building for their own programs," she added. "We deserve to keep our library and being able to check out hardback books from our library in our own city."

Several other residents filed similar complaints. An elderly gentleman said the city should strip all funding to the library system if the proposal goes through.

Another citizen said her concern is the "county telling us what to do with our building."

She also said library officials are depicting Waveland citizens as "old people who can't read."

"It's given a very bad image to the city," she said.

Alderman Tommy Longo said "people before us fought long and hard to get a library in Waveland."

He promised "more thought" by the Board of Aldermen on the issue, a sentiment echoed by Alderman Al Kingston.

"This issue deserves more thought and debate," he said.

The budget, completed just about an hour before the hearing, calls for a 1.85 millage rate increase to property owners. The new rate will be 14.5, up from 12.65. City officials said one mill translated into about $25,000 to city coffers.

Mayor John Mason said the new budget calls for a six percent increase in city spending. City employees are receiving merit raises, but that the average raise is about 2.5 percent. Last year, employees received a flat five percent raise.

Capital outlay projects include $75,000 in street paving that Mason promised "would be included in the budget every year, not just once every four years."

Also, over $50,000 has been included in capital expenditures for drainage projects. The two most pressing drainage problems are on Bienville and Idlewood streets. An additional $5,000 has been set aside for repair work on the Garfield Ladrer Pier.

The total projected revenue is $3,397,122, equal to the projected expenses. Mason said some anticipated projects had to be scaled back to balance the budget.

"I'm satisfied with the budget," he said. "We had to work hard and do some cutting."

"It's a budget the city can live with. There are so many things we want to do, but there's only so much money coming in."

The mayor added he would like to get an earlier start next year to avoid the last-minute number crunching as happened Friday.

Republican Revolution
"Is it history in the making, or just business as usual?" was the preeminent question when Newt Gingrich gave the U.S. House of Representatives to order on Jan. 4, 1995. Using the Contract with America as their blueprint, Republicans prepared for a second American revolution.

Inside the Republican Revolution offers a unique look at the "new" Capitol Hill. The one-hour documentary, airing on ETV Wednesday, Sept. 13 at 9 p.m. goes behind the scenes into closed sessions to record the political strategy and tactics of House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

Board, Waste District to open dialogue

BY ED LEPOMA

Hancock County Solid Waste District will find out Tuesday if they'll be able to expand operations into the Standard Community. And, they might also hear from anxious citizens who have already called the county School Board wondering what is going on out there.

A meeting is scheduled at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday between School Board members, and representatives of the Solid Waste District and the Board of Supervisors to see if the School Board will sell Section 16 land that the Solid Waste District needs to expand its rubbish and landfill operations. The parties will meet in School District administration offices, located at 451-A on U.S. 90 in Waveland.

Les Fillingame, the chairman of the Solid Waste District, asked for the meeting Wednesday "to open up dialogue" with the School Board.

Fillingame's request came after School Board Supt. Myrna Bourgeois came to the Board of Supervisors meeting Tuesday. She told supervisors she had been flooded with early morning telephone calls from concerned citizens after it was announced that Trans-America of Mobile, Ala. took over operations at the landfill, effective that morning.

Bourgeois said she thought supervisors violated its lease with the School Board by later turning over management of the landfill to Trans-America.

And, Steve Benvenuti, the school board's attorney, repeated the superintendent's concerns in the meeting with Solid Waste District commissioners on Wednesday. Benvenuti says the lease prohibits assignment or sublease of Section 16 land, and said he would ask for an attorney general's ruling.

At the heart of the controversy is what the school board intends to do with a 94-acre parcel of Section 16 land it owns in Standard.

The District, last June, gave Trans-America a 20-year lease to manage the whole operation. The District also obtained a state permit to operate the landfill, but it has never opened because the supervisors' original lease with the School Board was flawed.

It was discovered that the original lease included only 41 acres of the 94-acre tract, and not the 50-plus more needed for the landfill.

Fillingame hopes to convince the School Board on Wednesday to sell the entire site to the District. Without the remaining acreage, and if Trans-America backs out of its contract, the county would have to go back to square one on where to concentrate its solid waste.

Fillingame said, "At this point, it would be very hard for us to backtrack and find another property and start all over again."

Two arrested

Two Kiln men were arrested in Diamondhead Thursday on drug charges.

Gary E. Mendoza, 18, and Mark A. Necaise, 31, of Kiln, were arrested for possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute, said Terry Eley, director of the Narcotics Task Force. Eley said the two were allegedly in possession of three-eighths of an ounce of powder cocaine, with a street value of approximately $800.

The two were released on $10,000 bond. An Oct. 3 court date has been set.

The arresting officers were Brett Ladner of the Waveland Police Department, Jim Esposito of the Hancock County Sheriff's Office and Investigators Nathan Hoda and Matt Karl. Eley is the investigating officer.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

"CUEVAS QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

The cooler mornings sure have been welcomed by myself and many others.

Even if the temperatures get up around 90 degrees during the afternoons, the cooler mornings sure have been a big help.

It has been very hot this summer, and I really cannot recall a summer with so many hot days.

I am a warm-weather person, but I feel this coming winter will be one I will welcome, just as many other folks do.

One thing is for sure, we can talk about the weather, but we sure cannot change it.

Once again we will be having a big beach cleanup in Hancock County.

The cleanup is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 16 from 8 a.m. until about noon.

Individuals and groups may pre-register by calling the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce at 467-9048.

On the cleanup day there will also be a registration table at Beach Boulevard and Ulman, Bay St. Louis; the Garfield Ladner Pier, Beach Boulevard, Waveland; and Buccaneer Park entrance, Waveland west.

The registration points will also have trash bags to place the debris.

I understand the Diamondhead Rotary and Business and Professional Assn. will also do cleanup on cleanup day.

Your help will be needed on this cleanup day on our Hancock County beaches, so if you can, please help.

We will be giving you more information in Thursday's issue.

I see where the Hancock County Humane Society's Flea Market on Highway 90 is having some of the same problems the Goodwill retail store faces in Bay St. Louis.

People have old, useless items such as mattresses, television sets, typewriters, etc., and they just dump them in front or back of the businesses.

This causes the non-profit organizations to have to pay someone to take the items to a dump.

The Hancock County Humane Society's Flea Market is for the organization to raise monies, not to spend money.

Please, if you have useable items, bring them in, not those which the flea market cannot use.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pharmacists association stages national day of protest

To the Editor:

In survey after survey, consumers have repeatedly stated that they want to have the right to patronize the neighborhood pharmacy of their choice.

However, for several years now and with increasing regularity, many health insurance companies have been taking that choice away from millions and millions of consumers. The companies often force consumers to abandon the local pharmacy that has served them well for years. Patients are told either to patronize another pharmacy or to obtain drugs from unregulated mail order companies located hundreds of miles away.

In 1994, the Mississippi Legislature voted unanimously to eliminate this practice by enacting the Pharmacy Freedom of Choice Act which guaranteed patients the right to choose their own pharmacy. Unfortunately, many prescription benefit plans circumvent this law by claiming exemption under Federal ERISA statutes.

The result of these ill-advised practices of many insurance companies is many consumers suffer the ultimate elimination of choice: their local pharmacy goes out of business.

In just the past year, approximately four million people have lost their independent pharmacy because it was forced to close its doors permanently. Each week, about 80,000 more consumers are losing their pharmacy. In the past two years, forty-one independent Mississippi pharmacies have been forced to close their doors.

A day of national protest — "High Noon for Your Local Pharmacy" — is being staged on Sept. 20 to illustrate to consumers how the ill-conceived policies of health insurers are adversely affecting them. Quality pharmacist care is now being lost by millions of consumers in neighborhoods large and small across America.

If insurers are allowed to continue such unfair policies, the number of independent pharmacies closing their doors is sure to increase — with the ultimate losers being those whom pharmacists have served for so many years.

The time has come for consumers to stand up and say no. No longer can we allow the health and welfare of millions of Americans to be jeopardized by the unfair practices of many in the health insurance industry.

Sincerely,
Sam Daniel,
Executive Director
Mississippi Pharmacists Association

National deficit, welfare reform topics at town meetings

Over the past few weeks, I have had the opportunity to meet with constituents across South Mississippi about issues that concern them. Recent town meetings held in Lumberton, Petal and Ocean Springs were very successful. I hope to have at least two town meetings in every county this year.

As Congress comes back from its August break, I will return with a great deal of input from South Mississippi. During these town meetings and others I have held in the past few months in Long Beach, Biloxi, Lucedale, Hattiesburg, Petal, Lumberton, Wiggins and Picayune, many of the concerns were similar. Tackling our nation's sky-rocketing national debt and welfare reform tops the list.

I have been very pleased with the attendance and with the issues raised at these gatherings. Citizens know what is important to keep our nation in order. This is a step in the right direction.

Congress must follow the lead of the citizens who balance their household and business budgets by tightening their belts and working together. A common sense approach to our nation's problems is wanted and needed.

Every year our nation borrows more and more to make ends meet. Business owners and families cannot survive that way. Our nation is no different.

As of July 1995, our national debt exceeded $4.9 trillion, that's $4,960,152,000,000. Last year our nation's annual operating deficit, the money borrowed each year to cover the shortfall between revenues and the year's budget expenses, was $203 billion. Each year the operating deficit is added to the staggering national debt.

Interests payments on the debt now exceed $300 billion a year. This means a waste of

IN CONGRESS

By Rep. Gene Taylor

over $800 million each day on interests payments alone. Not a single penny of this money will ever educate one child, help one school, build one new bridge or highway in our cities, or even help to strengthen our nation's defense. Cuts must be made to control our run-away deficit.

At these town meetings and in the many letters I receive daily, South Mississippians also agree that welfare reform is essential. I have supported and will continue to support welfare reform that encourages self-sufficiency, is backed by pro-life groups, and most importantly puts the savings toward the deficit.

Earlier this year, I once again voted for a Balanced Budget Amendment to work towards reducing the national deficit. This amendment passed the House, but died in the Senate by one vote.

As Congress returns after the August break, we will have some very difficult choices to face in the coming weeks in order to finally balance the budget and establish true welfare reform.

Eligibility Verification Report (RVR) update

By Donald Mauffray, CVSO

In October 1994 VA wrote to everyone receiving a pension or parents' dependency and indemnity compensation about new rules concerning completion of Eligibility Verification Report (EVR) forms.

At that time VA said they would send another letter when the rule was changed. Because changing the rule is taking longer than expected, they want everyone currently receiving those benefits to know more now.

Annual report not required

You will not receive an EVR form for reporting income received in 1994.

If, beginning in January 1996, you and any family members have no income (other than your VA pension) and/or Social Security income, you no longer need to file your EVR forms.

Your Responsibility

Even though you did not receive an EVR form for 1994, you must tell the VA if any of the following occurred in 1994:

- gain or loss of a dependent
- you and your spouse separated or divorced
- your income changed
- your net worth (all cash, bank accounts, bonds, investments and real estate except your home) increased
- you moved

Unreimbursed medical expenses

You can report your unreimbursed medical expenses — only those paid by you. Do not report any amounts paid by insurance, Medicaid or anyone else. You can only claim the amounts you paid. If you have not already done so, you must report your 1994 medical expenses before the end of this year (December 31, 1995).

Remember, however, that the reporting period for your 1994 medical expenses are from the first of the month in 1994 following your last reporting period through Dec. 31, 1994. For example, say that your reporting period in the past was from July 1 of any given year through June 30 of the following year, then your 1994 unreimbursed medical expenses to be reported should be from July 1, 1994 through Dec. 31, 1994.

Beginning January 1996, all pensioners will report their unreimbursed medical expenses on a calendar year basis. So, anytime after Dec. 31, 1995 that you have your unreimbursed medical expenses gathered, including a printout from your pharmacist for the period Jan. 1, 1995 through Dec. 31, 1995, you may file for reimbursement from the VA.

Again, I want to stress that you may now report only your unreimbursed medical expenses. You do not need to file the EVR forms concerning income, etc., unless there has been a change. And, when a change does occur, it should be reported immediately. Do not wait until you file for reimbursements.

If you have any question or want to report any changes, call the VA toll-free at 1-800-827-1000 or my office at 467-2100.

It keeps more than memories alive.

BREWER'S WORLD

By Jimmie Brewer

There was a time, not so long ago, when I could dream for hours about someday being a real hero. Last Wednesday, along with millions of folks around the country, I watched another dude shatter a record that people thought would never be done.

Cal Ripken became an instant hero in the eyes of many young freckle-faced kids who dream of making the big leagues Wednesday when he broke Lou Gehrig's record of playing in 2,131 consecutive ballgames, a record always thought invincible. Ripken's feat is certainly commendable, but is not exactly what I would call earth shattering.

In case you folks forgot, Ripken makes a living by playing a GAME. He also gets a few months vacation each year, and disrupted perhaps baseball's greatest year last year because owners refused to increase his salary and other players' salaries to roughly the same amount as our national debt. It's not like Cal wears a drab blue work shirt and works 12 hours a day climbing all over a greasy, oily, press, sweating profusely, and cussing occasionally in an attempt to get a local newspaper out to his neighbors for 2,131 straight days without calling in sick. Throw in a few locker room jokes, and now you have a REAL hero.

I have a real problem with kids looking up to sports players and movies stars as role models. Take a look at some of the recent role models, whose world has seemingly come crashing down upon them.

There is the Juice, possibly the best running back to ever don a football jersey, who is now an admitted wife beater and is on trial for a gruesome double homicide.

Then there is Iron Mike Tyson. Now here is a dude who could punch the lights out of a speeding freight train, maybe in the top two or three best heavyweights in the history of boxing. But yet, he spent several years in the slammer for taking advantage of a young defenseless dudette.

No, I'll take a hard working, fun-loving, ordinary dude whose only claim to fame is that he can make artificial body noises by placing the palm of his hand in his armpit and flapping his arm like a chicken, as a hero over sports players any day of the week.

My hero is that t-shirt wearing, down-to-earth Cajun dude who's worked all his life doing whatever it took to support his family, and still finds the time to hone his crawfish-boiling skills.

It's the ordinary dudes and dudettes in this world who should be looked up to by our children. Not these multi-million dollar dudes who play a game for a few months, and then drive their luxury cars to the nearest dock so they can cruise around in their 75-foot yachts. It's time we all took a good look at who the real heroes are in our lives.

Ordinary heroes

Praise for do-gooders this week, goes out to you folks who set good examples for our children. Peace.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

Okra, one of the "most favorite" vegetables of the Southland, grows profusely throughout the hot summer months, even when cultivated by reluctant gardeners such as I.

Okra is thoroughly identified with the South and with Southern cooking, even though not as popular in other areas of the country. "Eat more okra; it cools the blood, and is good for you," the old saying goes.

And, as the temperature soars these steamy late summer days, I remember to heed that advice to increase the okra dishes on the menu. It's a pleasant task, as okra is tasty in so many ways. For example, you might follow the old Southern cooking custom of cooking whole okra pods atop butter beans or field peas, not only adding flavor to these vegetables, but also retaining more of the vitamins and minerals.

Native to West Africa, okra is widely grown in tropical and sub-tropical countries, where the pod is known under the Bantu name "gumbo." Seeds were brought to our country by slaves aboard the slave ships.

I like okra, and, I like the young tender pods—not the big pods—simmered barely tender, then chilled and served with oil and vinegar, salt and pepper. Okra is also tasty braised or sauteed in bacon drippings, after you wash the pods and cut off the stems and add a bit of lemon juice to cut the slipperiness which prejudices many against okra.

French fried okra slices are also favorites. For many Southern cooks "okra" means a heaping platter of crispier-than-crisp quick-fried slices. They're often called "Okra Oysters," as they have an almost oyster-like taste.

These are delicious as a "side dish" or as a quick snack or addition to the appetizer tray. Most cooks dredge the okra slices in cornmeal before frying quickly in a minimum of oil; you're not stewing the okra in a lot of oil, you're crisp-frying it, after all.

Dip the okra slices first into beaten egg accented with dashes of hot pepper sauce. Some cooks add a little milk to the beaten egg to make a batter. Next, dredge the okra in cornmeal (or flour, if you prefer).

Refrigerate the okra for a half hour, or longer, to ensure that the coating stays on the okra when you cook it. Fry in the hot oil in a heavy skillet, drain very well, and serve at once. (This freezes easily, for reheating when wanted).

When you want a more substantial dish, try:

OKRA AND TOMATOES WITH SAUSAGE

1/2 pound link or bulk sausage, cooked

Okra

- 2 Tblsp. bacon drippings
- 1 cup chopped or sliced onions
- 1/8 tsp. thyme
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 lb. fresh okra, sliced
- 1 1/2 cups chopped fresh tomatoes, or wedges if you prefer
- Pepper, salt to your taste
- Dash of white or brown sugar, as you prefer

First, saute the sausage with a bit of water over low heat in a large saucepan for say, 15 minutes or so, then remove the sausage. Cook the onion and okra in drippings until the okra stops "roping." If it starts to scorch, add a little water. Return sausage to the pan, add thyme and bay leaf, but don't stir.

Turn the mixture with a spatula every few minutes or so. Add tomatoes, sugar and seasonings, cover and simmer for 10 or 15 minutes. Discard the bay leaf before serving, of course.

Free prostate screening Sept. 13-14

Prostate cancer is the second most common cause of cancer death in men. Early detection is the key to survival.

To encourage awareness of this disease, which most often strikes men over 40 years of age, Gulf Coast Urology Clinic will host a free two-night screening Sept. 13-14 beginning at 6 p.m. at Hancock Medical Center in Bay St. Louis.

The free tests include a PSA (prostate specific antigen) lab test and a digital rectal examination.

"We are trying to target men who may be at risk, although they have no physical symptoms," said urologist Bradley Secret, M.D. The risk of developing prostate cancer increases with age, and yearly examinations can identify the disease in early, treatable stage.

Symptoms of prostate problems include:

- Weak or interrupted urine flow;
- Inability to urinate or difficulty in starting or stopping urination;
- Need to urinate frequently, especially at night;
- Blood in the urine;
- Painful or burning urination; or
- Continuing pain in the lower back, pelvis or upper thighs.

For additional information or to register for the screening, call 467-9081, ext. 2200.

Missed opportunities cost Hancock in loss

BY RICHARD MEEK

Slidell was a houseguest bearing gifts Friday night but Hancock graciously refused the Tigers' generosity. By the time the two had parted company, the Hawks were on the short end of a 16-7 score at Hancock.

"We had a lot of opportunities in the first half," Hancock coach Rocky Gaudin said. "There's no doubt when you don't score on those opportunities, it will haunt you."

The first half was played on Slidell's end of the field, thanks to outstanding special teams play by the Hawks, 1-2.

Twenty-two of Hancock's 24 first half plays were run inside Tiger territory, 16 inside the 30-yard line.

But a fumble (on the one-yard line), failed fake punt and missed field goal resulted in a scoreless first half.

"When we grade the film, it will be woulda, coulda, shoulda," Gaudin said. "If we are to win, we have to make the plays."

A blocked punt by Sterlin Kuhlmar on the Tigers' first possession set up the Hawks at the Slidell 27-yard line. Runs of 13 and seven yards by Darrell William and Kuhlmar's five-yard run brought the Hawks to the two. But a fumbled snap by quarterback Chad Peterson was recovered by the Tigers' Travis Holmes at the one.

A nifty punt return after the Hawk defense held Slidell, 1-1, without a first down gave Hancock possession at the Tiger 22-yard line. But the Hawks turned it over on downs when a fake punt on fourth and 19 at the Tiger 31-yard line failed.

Hancock began its next possession at the Tiger 42-yard line and drove it as far as the 24. But Peterson's fourth down pass fell incomplete to Brent Hatten.

The Hawks' fourth possession began at their own 30, their first play in run on their end of the field, but Jimmy Jones' 40-yard run on the second play of the drive took Hancock to the Slidell 36. Again, the Hawks were turned away when Mike Fejka missed a 40-yard field goal attempt.

The Hawks finally took advantage of field position to begin the second half. William, who was the Hawks' leading rusher with 43 yards on 10 attempts, returned the second half kickoff to the Tiger 42-yard line. Nine plays later, he caught a four-yard scoring pass from Peterson to give the Hawks a 7-0 lead with 7:24 remaining in the third quarter.

The fourth quarter, however, belonged to Slidell. Dorian Hart's 52-yard run and two-point conversion following a Hawk penalty gave the Tigers their first score of the year and an 8-7 lead with 10:45 remaining. Hart, who had 119 yards on 13 carries, added a two-yard scoring run and another two-point conversion with 1:46 remaining that gave the Tigers a 16-7 lead.

Hart's second score capped a seven-yard drive following Juan Nunez's interception and 22-yard return of a Peterson pass.

"The coaches told me to play out wider from the sidelines," said Nunez. "The opportunity was there."

"I was thinking about scoring, but when I got hit, I was thinking don't fumble."

Gaudin said the key play came late in the fourth quarter when William underthrew a wide open Eric Womack on a halfback option pass.

"There was no one within 40 yards (of Womack)," Gaudin said. "That was the crucial play."

Slidell finished with 249 yards, 144 in the second half.

"We were gambling a little bit in the second half," Gaudin said. "When you do that, you have the opportunity to make a big play, but you also give the other team an opportunity to make a play."

Despite Hawk losses in two of their first three games, Gaudin said "nothing is settled with this team yet."

"We have been in every game," he said. "Even with the missed opportunities tonight, we had a chance to win at the end."

"We must keep working hard." Hancock plays host to Poplarville on Friday.

Rocks fall short, 21-13; lose first game of year

BY JOE GEX

St. Stanislaus fell short on a late drive and the Rock-A-Chaws suffered their first loss of the season, a 21-13 setback to Long Beach Friday night at Stanislaus.

The Rocks fell to 2-1. Long Beach is 1-1.

SSC wasted little time getting on the board as Corey Charles scored on a 48-yard run on the Rocks' first play. Casey Swanson's PAT gave SSC a 7-0 lead with 9:28 remaining in the first quarter.

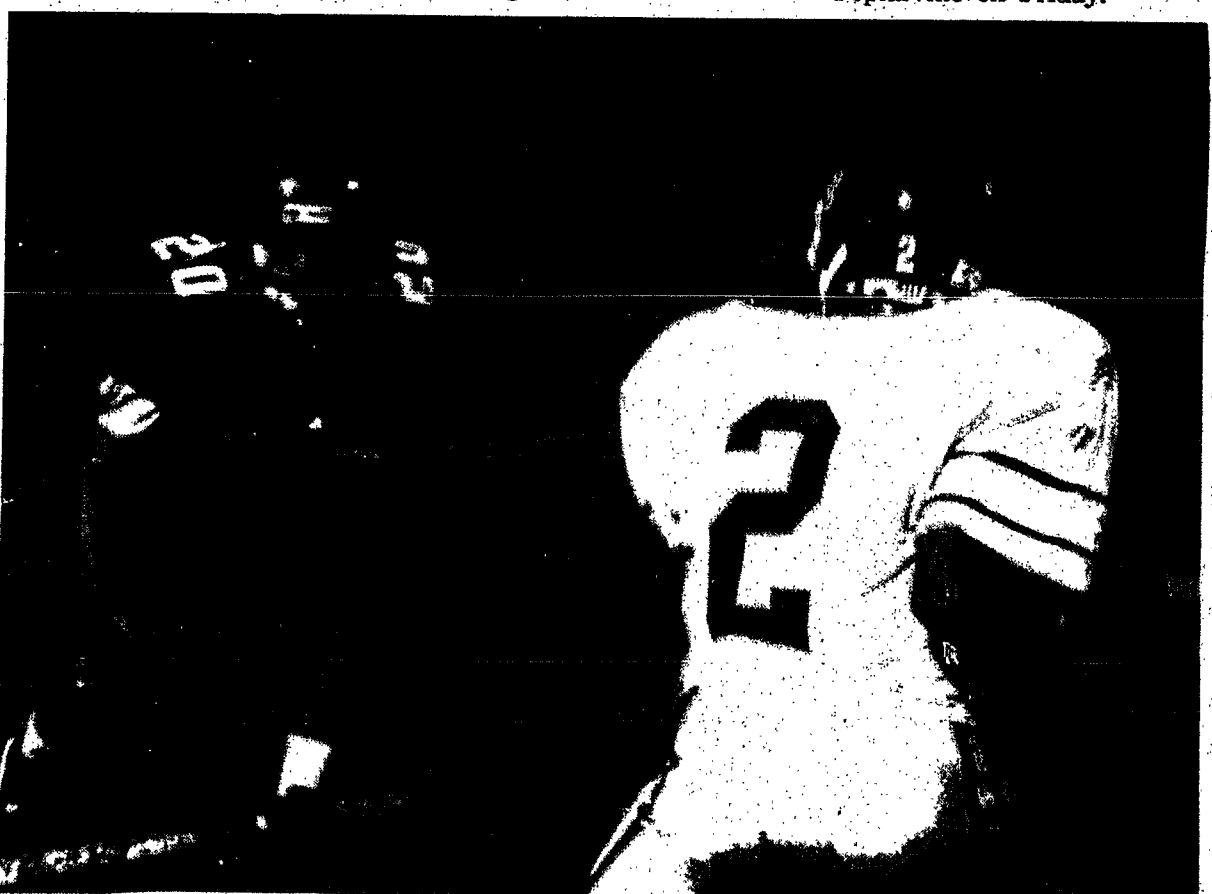

The Bearcats answered with an 80-yard drive that consumed nearly nine minutes. Jimmy Glass began the drive with a 16-yard run that was followed by a 12-yard pass from Lance Allen to Robert Lewis that carried to the Bearcat 48-yard line.

Brian Chappell capped the drive with a three-yard scoring run and Jacob Palmer's PAT tied the game at seven with 39 seconds left in the first quarter.

It was three plays and out for the Rocks, allowing the Bearcats to take over at midfield. Bear Allen carried 11 yards to the Rock 39-yard line. Four plays later, Chappell's one-yard scoring run and Palmer's PAT gave the Bearcats a 14-7 lead with 4:31 left in the first half.

After three consecutive incompletions, the Rocks were forced to punt again. Long Beach took over at the Rocks 41-yard line, and a 36-yard Allen to Lewis completion and a five-yard Brown run later, the Bearcats had increased the lead to 21-7 with 3:08 remaining.

SSC quarterback Correy Gex, who struggled in the first half, was intercepted on the Rocks' next possession. But Long Beach was unable to capitalize, as a 47-yard field goal attempt with 44 seconds remaining fell short.

The Rocks picked up a first down on their first possession of the second half following runs by Charles and Tyree Haynes. But the drive stalled, forcing SSC to punt.

The teams swapped punts until midway in the fourth quarter when the Rocks took over at the Bearcat 41-yard line. Brad Cannon appeared to score one play later but his run was nullified by a holding penalty. However, two player later, Gex threw a 29-yard scoring pass to David Bell that brought the Rocks to within 21-13 with 4:08 remaining.

The Rocks would have one more opportunity, but could not advance it. Penalties nullified a 21-yard to Bell and another long pass from Gex to Cannon.

"The damage was done in the first half," SSC coach Mario Genna said. "We could not get our linebackers to step up into the holes. We did everything we could to get them to move up but they just didn't play well."

In the second half, we stepped our defense and our play showed it. Offensively, we moved the ball.

"And we showed that we can play come from behind. We very well could be 3-0 with a few breaks and no penalties at crunch time."

"Next week (at North Forest) will be tough. It will be a battle."

Charles led the Rocks with 90 yards. Bell had 36 yards rushing.

Gex was 4 of 12 for 56 yards and one touchdown. He also threw one interception.

Wilcox: It all started with a $200 loan

BY ED LEPOMA

Delmar Wilcox parlayed a $200 loan from Merchants Bank of Waveland into a lifetime of security, and at 71, he continues to be one of the area's top real estate developers.

Wilcox says it was "just fate" that brought him to the pristine shores of Clermont Harbor in the summer of 1941.

He was orphaned at nine years old when his parents and four sisters perished in a fire at their family home in Rapid City, South Dakota. He was sent to grow up in a children's home in Woodstock, Ill., about 50 miles north of Chicago.

Right out of high school, he drove down to Clermont Harbor in 1941 to drive a sick friend back to Chicago. He met Mary Carr, and stayed in the area two months. Mary was working in the office of her father's sawmill.

Wilcox went back to Chicago, and decided to join the Armed forces. He enlisted in Norfolk, Va. with the Navy Seabees. He was an electrician's mate, attached to the 26th Naval Construction Battalion.

Wilcox's unit was sent to Gulfport, but before he was shipped out to active duty in the Pacific, he took a month's leave to come back to Waveland and marry Mary.

From California, his Seabee unit was shipped out to Guadalcanal. For 18 months, Wilcox and the Seabees fought side-by-side with Marines in some of the fiercest fighting of the war.

Wilcox developed malaria, and was sent home to recover at the Oakknoll Naval Hospital in Oakland, California, across the bay from San Francisco. He was discharged on the very day that peace was declared in 1945, and, as soon as he was well enough, Wilcox returned home to Waveland and to Mary.

"At first I started drumming up electrical work riding house-to-house on a girl's bike," Wilcox recalled. He carried tools of his trade in the bike's basket.

After business picked up, Wilcox said, "I got the courage to go down to the Merchants Bank, and I asked to borrow $200." Wilcox was granted the loan, and used it to purchase a 1933 International Truck. He used it to begin his electrical and air-conditioning contracting business.

Wilcox raised five children, and remained in business about 40 years until Hurricane Camille came through in August of 1969. "All I had left (of the business and residence) on Coleman Avenue was five slabs," he said.

He continued his business for a couple of more years after the storm, then turned it over to his son, Karl. He had already started planning for the future.

Wilcox and Mrs. C.B. Mollere had purchased several acres of land at Highway 90 and Waveland Avenue, again through a deal with Merchant's Bank.

"In all my years in business, I've never gone to another bank. They are all super people, as far as I'm concerned," said Wilcox.

When Mrs. Mollere became ill, Wilcox bought her out, and formed a partnership with Jody Gex. Together, they built Waveland's "Our Shopping Center," the first one-stop shopping center in Waveland.

From that venture, Wilcox formed his own real estate company, and has developed commercial and residential properties throughout Hancock County. Currently, he's developing John's Bayou estates in the Angley area.

"I've done pretty good for a damned Yankee that came south," Wilcox admits.

Company truck

Delmar Wilcox borrowed $200 from Merchants Bank 50 years ago to buy this used, 1933 International Truck to begin his electrical appliance business.

The Wilcoxs' will celebrated their 52nd wedding anniversary next January. They have five children: Karl, who is now in the video recording business locally; Jimmy, who owns Wilcox Pharmacy; Eileen Wilcox Dorn, who operates a laundromat where her father has his real estate offices; Celia Wilcox, who teaches at Bay St. Louis Middle School; and Marshall, who is in the electrical contracting business in New Zealand; and nine grandchildren.

Municipal bond market still strong despite tax-reform talk

The word has spread from Capitol Hill that there have been discussions about tax reform. Among these discussions is a flat-tax plan, originated from Rep. Richard Armey (R-Texas), that proposes that all earned income be taxed at a flat rate. The plan would also make all interest and dividend income non-taxable.

So if you're a municipal bond investor, this news may cause you some concern. However, you shouldn't base your investment decisions on speculation of radical tax reform. Instead, you should concentrate on the strong fundamentals of the municipal bond market.

Municipal bonds still provide one of the best available sources of tax-free income. According to "Muniview," this market is $1.3 trillion strong and 70 percent controlled by individual investors such as yourself.

Several other members of Congress also have created their own tax-reform plans that are currently being debated, some of which potentially would not impact municipal bonds' current status. Included in the other tax-reform ideas as a value-added tax, which would levy taxes on all goods at each stage of production, so your taxes would be included in the good's final price.

There is also a national sales tax proposal, which would eliminate all income tax and shift all taxation onto retail items purchased, much like a state sales tax.

And yet another plan, called the "USA Tax," taxes you only on what you spend and encourages savings and investment. Although these plans have gained a lot of attention recently, various experts believe that any of these tax-reform plans probably would not even reach a final form until, at least 1997, thus keeping the municipal bond market unaffected by potential tax reform for at least a couple of years.

Municipal bonds are sold by cities, states, municipalities, revenue districts and principal project authorities for the purposes of constructing or repairing schools, roads, sewers, hospitals, etc. They appeal to investors mostly because their income is free from federal, and in some cases, state and local taxes and the alternative minimum tax.

The proceeds from municipal bonds help fund projects in the areas in which they are issued. So if you're a local investor, you can feel confident that your money is working directly for the benefit of your community.

For investors not so concerned about tax reform's effects on municipal bonds, long-term municipal bond yields currently offer the highest relative value seen in more than a year, when compared to the yields of treasury securities.

But if you still feel uncertain about the tax-reform talk, you can still position your portfolio defensively by investing in municipal bonds with shorter maturities.

Despite the tax-reform debate, municipal bonds continue to provide relief to investors in high-income tax brackets, so don't let the media's recent hype about tax-reform plans frighten you from this market. But before making any decisions on municipal bonds, you should consult a professional investment broker to see if these bonds provide a proper balance to your portfolio and effectively match your risk tolerance and tax situation.

Financial Focus

Don't put off investing 'til tomorrow

John Smith plans to begin investing after he saves up a bunch of cash and when conditions are "just right."

Jane Doe, on the other hand, invests $50 every month in a mutual fund that meets her objectives for safety and growth.

Who has a better chance of building up a large nest egg?

Investing does not require expert timing or big sums of cash. Too often, individuals put off beginning an investment program, thinking they need to accumulate a large initial deposit and invest it at just the right time. On the contrary, systematically investing small sums of money on a regular basis through all financial conditions often provides better results than a large, one-time investment.

To illustrate the long-term benefits of systematic investing, let's assume an individual invested $2,000 in the Standard & Poor's 500 Index on his birthday every year from 1964 to 1994. These 30 systematic annual deposits, totaling $60,000 grew to $470,461 — nearly eight times the amount invested.

Although past results do not guarantee future performance, illustrations like this focus not only on the value of systematic investing, but also on the benefits of a long-term approach. During the 30-year period in our example, many events occurred to discourage investing: civil rights issues, Vietnam, trade deficits, oil crises, Watergate, a falling dollar, skyrocketing inflation and interest rates, and a stock market crash.

There were roughly 8,000 investing days in that period, yet the market made most of its gains in only 90 days. Knowing which 90 days to be in the market, though, would have been virtually impossible. Long-term investors who stayed in the market through all conditions would have been rewarded.

Yet another example reinforces the value of long-term investing. A study by Ibbotson Associates, a firm well-respected for its statistical data on the securities market, showed that during the 69-year period from year-end 1925 through 1994, larger company stocks averaged annual returns of 10.2 percent, and smaller companies averaged 12.2 percent. While short-term returns were probably a lot lower during certain periods of those years, overall, stocks provided attractive returns for investors who stuck with them for the long term.

Trying to save up for one big investment, and attempting to predict the perfect time to invest for the short term, can be extremely difficult. On the other hand, starting now with smaller amounts is not only easier, it can be much more rewarding.

How long can debts be collected?

Jan Lukens, MBA, CFP
Consumer Money
Management Specialist

Q. I have an old personal loan that I could not afford to pay when I was in school. Now the creditor has started calling me to collect again. Isn't there some time limit for collecting debts?

A. In most cases creditors have a limited number of years to sue you after you fail to pay your debt. This is called a statute of limitations. According to William Lee Guice III with the Biloxi law firm of Rushing & Guice, "in Mississippi, the statute of limitations on most debts is three years. It runs from the date of default."

Guice says "with a deficiency, the statute of limitations is one year from the date of sale." A deficiency judgement is the difference between the amount you owe the foreclosing or repossession lender and the amount of the sales price in the foreclosure sale. It is called a judgement, but the lender does not have to sue you to get it. However, the lender can't treat it like a court judgement. For instance, they can't attach wages to collect it.

If the creditor has taken legal action and entered a default judgement against you, he may have a longer period to collect. The statute of limitations for a court judgement runs seven years. The creditor can file suit to extend the judgement period indefinitely says Guice.

Attorney Robin Leonard, author of Money Troubles, says statutes of limitations can be waived, revived, or extended. "Waiving the statute of limitations means giving up your right to assert it as a defense." You may have done so if you signed an agreement to extend or lower your payment on an installment loan.

If so, Leonard says you probably did not waive the statute forever. "Instead, you probably gave the creditor the right to sue you for the same number of years — from the time you missed any payment under the new agreement."

Leonard says the statute of limitations can be revived or extended by making partial payment or giving a promise to repay depending on state law. In Mississippi, the time is extended or revived only with a new written promise to pay.

Sending payments does not extend the time.

There are instances in which the statute of limitations is automatically extended. Guice says "anytime there is fraud involved, the statute of limitations does not run. If the debtor leaves the jurisdiction and cannot be found, the statute of limitations would not start again until the debtor returns." A statute of limitations is automatically extended if the debtor is in prison or under the age of 18 according to Leonard.

There is no statute of limitations on federally insured student loans. Though there are several exceptions to the rule, student loans are generally non-dischargeable. Guice reminds consumers and creditors that the rules relating to statutes of limitations vary greatly from one state to another. They also change depending on the type of loan. Thus, it is important to consult your legal advisor regarding the specific laws that relate to you.

Guice adds "the debtor can choose to waive his own statute of limitations. The statute of limitations is a defense. It does not extinguish the debt."

to submit a full report on what happened on the site.

Remel said he doesn't know what plans, if any, the owners have for the track. He also said the owners do not have a building permit.

The cutting operation is on property to the rear of the main house at Camp Onward, and is not owned by the Tournillon family, which had wanted to open a bed and breakfast operation. Their attorney, Victor Frankiewicz, said the Tournillons were as upset as other nearby neighbors to see the logging operation.

Casino Magic, meanwhile, has begun clearing operations for an 18-hole golf course. On Wednesday, Carragee referred questions on that matter to Favre. The mayor said Friday he personally had routed the oversight of Casino Magic tree protection matters to Carragee.

While the city ordinance channels all such matters through the tree advisor, Favre said, "because of a conflict of interest between Phillip (Remel) and Casino Magic, I thought it was best to send it to Carragee."

That conflict, said Favre, exists because while Remel is a contractor to the city, he also has done consulting work for Casino Magic and private individuals as well.

He disputed any notion that Casino Magic had violated the tree ordinance. "Casino Magic has done everything they have been asked to do -- to the T -- everything that they have been told."

J.B. Rose, Casino Magic's senior director of development, said Friday the casino has complied with the city's tree ordinance and plans to continue to do so even though much of the casino's acreage isn't covered by it.

While much of the casino's golf development site is properly that is covered by the city's zoning ordinance, and thus the tree ordinance, the original tract that the casino annexed into the city remains unincorporated. The tree ordinance pertains only to property zoned by the city.

Rose said Casino Magic has given Remel permission to roam all Casino Magic territory, covered or not, in a spirit of cooperation.

Before construction of the golf course began, Rose called Carragee concerned about the casino's ability to comply with the code's requirement that a site plan be drafted, detailing every tree on the 160-acre course to be developed. Rose said in much of the area, it's impossible to walk through the terrain.

Carragee spoke with Favre, Rose said, and agreed to the casino's alternative plan: any time workers encounter a tree even suspected of carrying "protected" status, work would stop, pictures would be taken, the tree flagged, and the building inspector notified.

Rose said in all cases possible, workers have shifted their route slightly to permanently avoid trees. In 15 other cases, the casino has sought city permission to remove trees that are in strategic spots, such as mid-fairway. Rose said they have so far wrapped some of those trees with protective barriers rather than have them removed, in hopes they can stay in place.

Relations between Rose and Remel are obviously strained. Rose arrived in town in January 1993, to direct the construction of Casino Magic Inn. Most of the rest of the casino's structures were in place, including the RV Park, and parking lots.

Rose said Remel took issue with Rose's consideration of three trees in the inn vicinity. And, he said, there are other trees that Remel feels will die in the future as a result of early Casino Magic construction nearby -- mostly trees amid parking lots.

There are other differences between the casino management and Remel as well. The tree advisor has contended that the tree ordinance gives him authority to put a monetary value on any tree that's to be removed -- and requires the owner to invest that amount in new trees, said Rose.

Actually, the ordinance only requires a one-for-one replacement of certain trees, on the recommendation of the tree advisor, Rose said.

"We will work with whomever the city wants us to work with, and we will comply with the city ordinance on protected trees. In fact, we have complied," said Rose, despite what he described as a "checkered relationship" with Remel caused by conflicting opinions on what the ordinance requires.

"My own personal view is that Mr. Remel's personal realm of authority is jeopardized by all of this. I think Mr. Remel is trying to make a stand as a person whose authority is granted by the city, but he wants to operate outside the authority of the building inspector."

"...I don't know if it's self aggrandizement, or what, but he feels he's the only one who is qualified to identify protected trees."

Remel offered council partial copies of the tree ordinance which was written to "regulate, control and promote the planting of trees, to encourage the protection of existing trees in the streets and public grounds within the city, to regulate the preservation, replacement and indiscriminate removal of trees on private property."

Remel said under normal procedure, he is notified by the building inspector once a permit has been sought that affects trees. He inspects the property at issue to ensure compliance with the tree ordinance and receives a $25 fee for the inspection.

Remel said in the four years he's been on the job, he has never refused to issue a permit -- in most cases tree-cutting is recommended because the tree is dead or dying or poses a structural nuisance to a nearby house. His fees, he said, would total no more than $12,000 since 1991.

While the city hasn't rejected any requests to remove trees so far, said Remel, some property owners have been required to replace 12-to-15-inch protected trees with young trees.

"But a commercial operation shouldn't be allowed to remove 30-inch tree and replace it with a 2-and-a-half-inch stem," he said.

While Favre didn't go into detail on the matter, he said city officials had discovered a "problem" with tree ordinance enforcement and had tried to reorganize and streamline the operation. All of the enforcement, he said, has been placed under Carragee.

Still, Favre and council member Charles Scianna said they did not wish to see Remel resign, and the council did not accept the resignation he offered.

Commissioners also heard a report that the county had issued 10 more building permits in August for houses or trailers that would be placed on lots in unincorporated areas that would be adjacent to bayous and canals.

Currently, there is no plumbing code to regulate the dumping of untreated sewage in unincorporated areas of Hancock County.

the city is going to back off from its agreement, please advise, and I will file a petition with the Mississippi Department of Transportation alleging the appropriate facts and proceed to do the matter without the assistance of Bay St. Louis. Also, in conjunction with the petition, CSX will probably seek remedies for the city's failure to proceed as agreed."

That statement, by CSX senior attorney Stephen H. Shook, was in a letter in which he also suggested that any accident on the crossings that were to have been closed may leave the city in a liability position.

In May, City attorney John Scaife forwarded a modified joint petition for CSX signature, saying the city and the railroad have agreed to close the crossings at Ballentine, Citizen and Agnes streets, in addition to a fourth crossing that would be picked by the Department of Transportation.

Mayor Eddie Favre said Tuesday that in light of public objection to closings at Ballentine and Citizen, only the Agnes Street crossing would be closed.

Help plants prepare for oncoming winter

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

The first official day of autumn is Sept. 23, but many of your plants are already in an autumn state of growth. This means trees and shrubs are getting ready for winter and some show readiness for next spring.

Do you find that hard to believe? Just look at the terminal buds at the ends of shoots, and you'll see that the shoots have stopped getting longer and rather than leaves developing there are protective bud scales instead.

The native, deciduous rhododendrons have a large flower bud for next spring topping the end of almost every branch. A close look at azaleas would reveal next spring's flower buds already formed. If you have conditions similar to last fall, some of these azalea flower buds will bloom in the next few weeks.

Apple, peach and pear trees are getting ready for next year and have formed the buds for 1996's flowers, shoots and leaves. This may be hard to believe, since many apple and pear trees still have this year's fruit waiting to be harvested.

Trees and shrubs are building up food reserves to carry them through the winter, and we need to give them all the help we can.

A tree entering winter in a starved or weakened condition is more likely to be injured or killed by cold than a tree that has moved slowly into its dormant state with a rich supply of carbohydrates stores in the lower trunk and roots.

An important thing we can do to help is make sure they don't dry out during the fall when rains are scarce. Plants that lack water and have wilted foliage aren't taking up nutrients from the soil and aren't manufacturing sugars.

Keep the soil moist around trees and shrubs, especially those planted earlier this year and more recently during the fall. Water thoroughly once a week when it hasn't rained and mulch around the plants.

Be sure to keep the leaves on trees and shrubs by continuing to control foliage-damaging insects and diseases. The premature dropping of leaves puts an end to the build-up of stored sugars which means plants are weak when they go into the winter and will be even weaker in the spring if they survive.

The removal of leaves either by insects, diseases or even pruning at this time of year can force plants to reverse themselves and begin growing to make new leaves when they should be getting ready for winter. New growth utilizes stored food reserves and often lacks sufficient time to mature before deadly cold arrives.

The wrong kind of fertilizer applied in late summer can also induce new growth on trees and shrubs. We need to hold off on sources of nitrogen, while any needed phosphorus or potash called for on the basis of a soil test can be applied.

With proper care, your plants can enter into winter in good condition. The care you provide during the next couple of months will determine whether or not this is the case.

Taking care of your plants now will ensure their bloom next spring. (Photo by Richard Meek)

Too Good For Drugs

TOO GOOD FOR DRUGS, an alcohol and other drug program for kindergarten through sixth grade, provides elementary school children with age-appropriate information about alcohol and other drugs and teaches skills that help youngsters to resist them. Lessons are not only factual, but also fun.

The TOO GOOD FOR DRUGS course for kindergarten through fifth grade includes a specific curriculum for each grade level as well as student workbooks and other materials needed to implement the program. Each grade has 10 lessons designed to be taught by the classroom teacher. The topics include Peer Pressure, Self-Esteem, Decision-Making and Alcohol and Other Drug Information. The curricula are filled with creative ideas designed to increase each child's awareness of the special qualities which make him/her unique.

The TOO GOOD FOR DRUGS course for sixth grade is comprised of 18 lessons. Sixth graders learn social competence skills they can use the rest of their lives. The program helps them grow into responsible, independent young adults, capable of making intelligent, informed decisions.

This is a positive program which emphasizes skills for healthy living. Students learn to value, nurture and protect themselves.

The schools in Hancock County and the Hancock County Sheriff's Department participate in the program, in conjunction with Harrison County and the Coast Crime Commission.

Nearly 5,000 students in Hancock County are participating in the program.

National Hunting and Fishing Day, Sept. 23

Gov. Kirk Fordice has proclaimed Sept. 23 as Hunting and Fishing Day in Mississippi, according to the Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks.

The fourth Saturday in September traditionally has been set aside for more than 20 years in the United States to celebrate the contributions made by hunters and fishermen to wildlife resource management.

"Hunting and fishing have always been an important part of Mississippi's outdoor tradition," Gov. Fordice said. "One of our most important responsibilities to this and future generations of Mississippians is to conserve our state's natural and wildlife resources."

For more than a century hunters and fishermen have been at the forefront of the conservation movement. They have requested special fees and taxes be placed upon their equipment to help pay for wildlife management programs.

Programs such as Pittman-Robertson and Dingell-Johnson have benefited not only game animals but non-game species of the COASTAL FAMILY HEALTH CENTER HANCOCK COUNTY CLINIC located at 100 Hancock Square Drive

In order for our non-profit organization to be able to provide the highest quality health care possible within our limited funding, we find it necessary to consolidate our Hancock County Clinic location into our other clinic locations.

The Hancock County Clinic will close on September 30, 1995.

Our valued patients from the Hancock County Clinic will be served through our other locations in Gulfport, Saucier, Biloxi and Vancleave, or by our Mobile Unit which visits Camille Village, the Delisle Community & Ladnier Homes.

Patients who choose to transfer their records should contact our staff at the Hancock County Clinic as soon as possible. If you know which of our other clinics you will be going to, please let us know so we can send your records to that location as soon as we can.
Call us at 466-3144 to let us know your choice.

WITH THE FUTURE OF HEALTH CARE

TO PROVIDE HIGH QUALITY CARE
WITH FEWER DOLLARS. We regret any

Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 3253

In recognition of excellence in promoting Americanism and the patriotic principles of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, four received the Veterans of Foreign Wars Americanism awards. The awards were presented at the V-J Day veterans reunion dinner Sept. 2 at the Bay St. Louis VFW Post 3253.

Those who received the awards were POWs Bataan survivors J. C. Baxter, Lloyd J. Delahorne and Sidney Snow. Congressman Gene Taylor also received the award for his work with the Veterans of Foreign Wars over the years. All three of the Bataan survivors were awarded 1996 memberships in Post 3253.

POW J. C. Baxter spoke on the conditions of the Japanese WWII POWs during the war, and Congressman Taylor spoke on Congress and veterans' rights. The VFW had three of their Mississippi Department officers, headed by Senior Vice Commander Fred Scarborough, at both the morning and reunion programs.

Some 86 veterans and guests attended the reunion and many more attended the "To the Colors" morning V-J Day wreath laying at the Bay Flag Memorial.

The Post Auxiliary headed by V-J Day chairman Lee Millwood prepared and served the meal that was enjoyed by all in attendance.

The next meeting of the VFW Post 3253 and Auxiliary is Sept. 21 at 7:30 p.m.

The post is open from 3:30 p.m.-midnight Thursday through Sunday.

For information on the VFW, contact Commander Gene Schloegel at 601-467-6772.

Stennis 'Woman of the Year' awards

Long Beach residents Lane Cobb and Pennie Turner each received a NASA/John C. Stennis Space Center (SSC) Woman of the Year award at a luncheon ceremony held Aug. 24 at Keesler Air Force Base.

Cobb is the NASA news chief at SSC and is responsible for enhancing media relations. She received the award in the professional/administrative category for her professionalism and dignity when performing tasks ranging from the production of news releases, videotapes, public service announcements, newsletters, brochures and other technical publications in support of NASA's mission at SSC to the organization of and participation in special events, such as community leaders' briefings, open houses, local chamber of commerce meetings and other community and civic functions.

NASA's Turner, secretary for the Systems Engineering Division at SSC, won the award in the administrative/clerical division. Turner was cited for her energy and drive to accomplish any task requested of her. She was integral in the development of a data package that supported the transition of the responsibility of Space Shuttle Main Engine Testing from Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., to SSC.

Turner also has volunteered her abilities by assisting the U.S. Navy in the preparation of recruitment materials and by assisting in the coordination of a scholarship fund drive for local students.

A sitewide committee of non-NASA members of the Federal Women's Program selected the two women from a pool of nine qualified NASA nominees. The award ceremony was held in conjunction with the federal observance of women's Equality Day, an annual event observed at government agencies nationwide.
